

ENLISTING NO FILIBUSTERS.

Guatemalan Officials Deny that They Are Recruiting in New York.

The War Will Be Over Ere Troops
Could Get There, They Say.

News from the seat of war in Central America is meagre, and all that the outside world knows about the desperate struggle going on there between San Salvador and Guatemala is that these two little republics are still at it, tooth and nail, like a pair of Kilkenny cats, with no great apparent advantage on either side.

Each Government claims to be ahead in the fight, and reports of victories and defeats are highly colored one way or the other, according to the source from which they come.

Just now the grand cheer is on the Salvadorian side, whose army, reinforced by 6,000 Indians, is reported to be advancing in Guatemala territory and scattering havoc in every direction.

The next mail from the Guatemala side, and describe a bloody battle with a crushing defeat for the Salvadorians.

As a general rule, Central American wars and revolutions are over in a week or ten days at the most, and the fact that the end of the Guatemala-San Salvador imbroglio is not yet in sight seems to indicate that the situation in the present case is more serious than has been generally believed.

Further interest is now aroused in the affairs of these two pugnacious little Republics by the report circulated downtown to-day that a big filibustering expedition in behalf of the Guatemala Government was being organized in this country.

According to this rumor, both Minister Fernando Cruz and Consul-General Jacob Diaz, the representatives of the Guatemala Republic now in this city, had received offers from a certain "don" of the States army, one a Colonel and another a Brigadier-General, to furnish several thousand troops for reinforcing the Guatemalan army.

The ex-Colonel, who is said to be a Missionary, has promised to raise 3,000 recruits in that State, and is already having them ready to embark for the seat of war within two weeks; while it is rumored that the ex-Brigadier would raise two regiments of filibusters, each of 2,000 men, to be shipped south immediately.

The plans for this expedition, which are reported to be already arranged in detail, and that the services of several military experts in this country had been secured to carry out the campaign, with the prospect of annihilating the ambitious Salvadorians with ease and despatch as soon as they could get at them.

When an Evening World reporter called upon Consul-General Diaz, at his office, 102 Front street, this morning, he said that he was in a state of great indignation over the report.

"There is not a word of truth in the story," he said, "and I can assure you most emphatically that neither Mr. Diaz nor myself is engaged in any such enterprise as that reported."

The story originated in a letter which I received from some one who offered me to raise some recruits for our army. The whole thing is absurd, however, and I never paid any attention to the offer."

"The statement that we have deposited $30,000 in the hands of trustees to insure the payment of the wages of these filibuster troops, and that the money is not in that kind of business, is a pure invention."

CAPT. DALY HIT THE "GOP."

The Irish Athlete Knocked Out
Police Sergt. Horbelt.

Small-Sized Panic on the National Theatre Stage.

Capt. James C. Daly, the noted Irish giant, athletic swordsman, prize-fighter and general sports, was looked upon with admiration by the spectators who filled the Tombs Police Court this morning when he swaggered into that temple of justice.

The Captain had "slugged" a policeman, knocking a tooth down the latter's throat and cutting his lip as if with a meat axe.

Daly's massive form was attired in a light suit of clothes, and a brown derby had covered his bullet-shaped head. The policeman, court-clerk at the burly giant and expressed the opinion that "the top of his head ought to have been smashed in."

The story told to Justice White was to the effect that while a wrestling match was in progress at the National Theatre, on the lower, lower, night between Ernest Horbelt, a Russian named Malakoff, Sergt. Horbelt, of the Mulberry Street Police Station, stepped from between the wings and told the men that the match could not go on if there was any money stake up.

Young Roebler is a protégé of Capt. Daly's, and as Roebler was getting the best of the match, the Captain did not want anything to interfere with him.

In the midst of the excitement Capt. Daly jumped forward and landed a terrific blow on the Sergeant's mouth. This created a small-sized panic. The Captain escaped to the gallery of the theatre and hid himself.

The Sergeant had his wounds dressed and officers were sent out at once in all directions to look for the Captain.

Justice White held Daly in $500 bail for examination. Lawyer Joseph Moss, of Howe & Hummel's office appeared for the prisoner.

Alabaster, saloon-keeper, 417 East Fifty-fifth street, became surety for Daly, and the latter went out of court with his friends.

McGONIGAL IN COURT AGAIN.

Old Dr. McGonigal, accused of killing Annie Goodwin, the cigarette girl, by malpractice; her lover, "Gus" Harrison; Mrs. Fanny Shaw, and colored driver Davis, held as accessories to the crime, all of whom were confined in the Tombs, appeared this morning before Judge Miles Beach in the Special Term of the Supreme Court.

The unavailing quartet was under the escort of Tombs Keepers Smith, Roberts and McCaffrey and Detective Price.

They arrived early, and as soon as the doors were open at 10.30 crossed the room and took seats under one of the tall windows.

150 LIVES WERE IMPERILED.

Warschauer and His Wife Remanded on an Awful Charge.

A Diabolical Plot to Burn a Crowded
Tenement.

Solomon Warschauer, a peddler, and his wife were arraigned in Essex Market Court this morning, charged with a diabolical plot to burn the five-story double tenement at 114 Willet street at the risk of terrible loss of life.

The plot is one of the most deliberate and heinous that Judge Duffy has ever listened to, and he expressed his indignation with apparent great effort. Then his eyes wandered to the little three-year-old tot, who buried his face in his mother's dress while playing hide and seek with the court policeman, all unconscious of the terrible crime with which his parents were accused.

The Justice gave the cringing pair another contemptuous look, and said: "I'll remand them both until the Fire Marshal makes an investigation. Let the child go with its mother."

Neither Warschauer nor his wife would make any statement this morning, but Warschauer admitted that he had an insurance of $1,000 on goods that the police say were barely worth $15.

According to Detective McCormack and Brennan of the Union Market Station, Warschauer and his wife moved into the tenement a few months ago and took three rooms in the rear on the second floor.

There are twenty-two families in the tenement, aggregating over a hundred and fifty men, women and children.

Three of Warschauer's children work in a clock factory and the two youngest are at home with the mother.

Warschauer went out with his pack as usual yesterday morning, and the oldest child, a girl, in which it appeared that she was of the age of about 10, was seen of Mrs. Warschauer until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when she left the house with her little ones, carefully locking the door.

She had hardly gotten out of the building before Minnie Bernstein, a young girl living on the fourth floor, discovered smoke coming out through the cracks around Warschauer's door, as she was going down stairs.

She ran to the door and tried to open it, when a terrific explosion inside shook the whole house.

Miss Bernstein dashed down the stairs shouting to the neighbors to get out. In an instant the whole tenement was aroused and a panic ensued.

The smoke spread rapidly through the building, and the frightened inmates rushed pell-mell into the street like terrified sheep. Many women left their children behind, and their pleadings for help were drowned in the confusion.

August Springer, of 111 Willet street, heard the screaming and saw the smoke and the flames, and he rushed to the scene and arrived before the flames had burst in Warschauer's door.

HOW DID LENA DAUM DIE?

Some Dark Mystery Surrounds the New Jersey Girl's Fate.

Sick, Dead and Buried Within a Few Brief Hours.

The usually quiet and peaceful little village of Orange, N. J., is in a state of great agitation to-day over the sudden and mysterious death of Lena Daum at Youngville, Sullivan County, N. Y.

Lena's relatives, though poor, are well known in Orange, and the young woman herself, who is particularly attractive in her person, appearance, being tall, handsome and well formed, was a general favorite among her set.

The facts which have come out since the report of her death so far from home on Saturday last have led her friends to suspect that she may have met a fate similar to pretty Annie Goodwin.

The telegram announcing first the sickness, then the death and finally her burial came to her grief-stricken parents all within a few short hours of each other, and the unseemly haste with which the poor girl's body has been thus disposed of before any of her friends and relatives could arrive to take charge of it make the circumstances surrounding the case still more doubly suspicious.

Lena was away from home on June 16, rather suddenly, her friends thought, to visit a friend who lived in Youngville, N. Y. She was then living as a domestic in the family of Ezra H. Snow, of Orange.

It has been discovered, since she went away that her trip was made at the urgent invitations and requests of one William Kays, a married man, who formerly lived in Orange, but who now runs a farm in Sullivan County.

Before he left Orange he was well acquainted with Lena and used to visit her often at the house where she was employed.

Since he has lived in Sullivan County he has kept boarders at his farm-house and has entertained there several young women whom he knew when he lived in Orange.

Among Lena's things at Mr. Snow's house were several letters written by her to the friends of the dead girl, and the intimacy between the two had been much closer than her friends had suspected.

Mr. Lindeman, of Orange, the husband of Lena's sister, at once placed these letters before the prosecuting authorities of Orange, and at their advice has started off for Youngville to lay the case before the District Attorney of Sullivan County.

Nothing is known as yet in regard to the circumstances of the case, but the receipt which is obtained from the following slip taken from a country newspaper published in Sullivan County:

"We, the undersigned, do hereby certify that on the 27th inst. we were present at the funeral of Lena Daum, who died at the house of W. H. Kays, at Youngville, N. Y., and that she was buried in the cemetery at Orangeville, N. Y., who has been buried there a short time."

Whether any relatives will be placed in this statement is still uncertain. Youngville is thirteen miles from any railroad station and has no telegraph office.

JUSTICE HEARD.

The Man Who "Annoyed" the Hospital Doctors May Yet Go Free.

Judge Duffy Promptly Reopens
the Case of Michael Boyle.

Effect of "The Evening World's" Exposure of His Outrageous Arrest.

Michael Boyle, the story of whose commitment to prison for two months because he annoyed the young officials of Gouverneur Hospital by being so ill that his anxious friends summoned, through the police, an ambulance officer to the convenience of the hospital authorities thought proper, was printed in full detail in THE EVENING WORLD of yesterday, is to be given a chance to-day to prove that he was guilty of no offense, and that his arrest and imprisonment constituted an unpunished outrage upon an innocent and suffering man.

The story touched a responsive chord in the heart of the public, and there is every prospect that the man will be released before nightfall and restored to his two heart-broken sisters, whose only support he is.

Police Judge Duffy, out of his well-known regard for justice, after reading the story in THE EVENING WORLD, decided to reopen the case, and set down the examination for 2 o'clock this afternoon in the Essex Market Police Court.

The little Judge was more than busy when an Evening World reporter called on him, for the purpose of bringing to his attention the fact that a sick man had been committed by him to the Work-house for two months on the uncorroborated evidence of a single ambulance surgeon.

Judge Duffy was thunderstruck when he heard the startling array of facts read to him by the reporter in his private room at Essex Market. He said he wanted it distinctly understood that all the evidence before him was embodied in the formal complaint of the surgeon, setting forth that the man was drunk and had disturbed the ambulance service.

IT WAS AN EX PARTE CASE. "How could I act otherwise than I did," he said, "when there was no other evidence than what was contained in the affidavit of the doctor? I have not been officially informed of the facts as narrated in this story, and they surprise me."

"What was Boyle was brought before me the charge was such that the man should be made an example of, and I sent him to the island for two months. I believed that Boyle needed a little reprimand, as he looked like a drinking man, and I deemed it advisable to send him to a place where he could reconvert."

REOPENED AT ONCE. "There was no evidence before me that Boyle was not guilty of the charge against him, and I consider that I imposed upon him a light sentence. But it is not my object to be unjust or uncharitable in my dealings with the scores of prisoners that daily come before me, and since I learn that there are other alleged facts in the case that were not brought to my notice, and if THE EVENING WORLD is of the opinion that injustice has been done by me, I will reopen this case and set the examination down for 2 o'clock this afternoon."

SEEKING MORE EVIDENCE. Judge Duffy then issued orders that subpoenas be made out for the appearance of all the witnesses in the case. Six subpoenas were signed by the Judge and handed to the reporter for service.

JOY AT BOYLE'S HOME. When THE EVENING WORLD man conveyed the glad tidings to the sisters of Boyle that their brother would have an opportunity to explain away the unmerited charge against him they wept with joy.

"Oh!" ejaculated Honora Boyle, "I am rejoiced to know that our poor brother will be given an opportunity to prove his innocence. He was most unjustly carried off to prison, and I know we can show Judge Duffy that the poor fellow was made a victim of injustice."

THE EVENING WORLD has subpoenaed six witnesses to testify at the hearing this afternoon.

LONDON POPULAR INTEREST IN THE DUNLOP DIVORCE CASE.
LONDON, July 30.—The Dunlop divorce case appears to have taken entire possession of the English mind.

Nothing else is discussed at the clubs, restaurants, sporting resorts, and at society luncheons and dinners.

Boys are freely made on the verdict of the jury, but the odds are generally against a divorce being granted.

A well-known Irishman offered last night to wager 25 with George Lewis, the well-known criminal lawyer, who was employed by Lord Clancarty in trying into Lady Dunlop's antecedents, that his client would lose, but that astute solicitor declined to involve himself.

Lady Dunlop, Wertheimer, Sister Florence, with her husband, and the solicitor for the defense dine together every evening at the Cafe Royal in Regent street, being, of course, the observed of all observers.

It is noticed by the curious public that Wertheimer invariably pays the bills. In the mean time young Viscount Dunlop spends his evenings in seeking distraction at his favorite music halls.
